

Acknowledgment of Academic Honesty Policy

Dr. Kerry Veenstra (text by Prof. Darrell Long)
CSE 13S-01

Winter 2023

I have read and understand the policy on academic dishonesty (more commonly referred to as “cheating”) as described in the syllabus for the Winter 2023 offering of CSE 13S and the University policy on academic honesty, listed at <https://ue.ucsc.edu/academic-misconduct.html>. I have asked for clarification of any details of the academic honesty policy that I did not understand.

In particular, I understand that obtaining solutions, in whole or in part (text or source code) to graded class assignments from any source—including work done by former or current Computer Science students, professors, tutors, other humans, animals, zombies, space aliens, reptilians from the core of the Hollow Earth, Majestic 12, materials found on the Internet, et cetera—that is not explicitly sanctioned by Prof. Long or the teaching assistants is unacceptable. I also understand that providing full or partial solutions to anyone else, whether in this class or not, is likewise unacceptable. I understand that all work I submit must be exclusively my own, with the exception of any team projects during which I am allowed to collaborate only with my assigned partners. Information and assistance from the professor, teaching assistants, assigned project partners, course textbooks, course web site, and code and documentation (e.g., man pages) supplied with the C Standard Library (libc) may be freely used without acknowledgment. I agree to document all other sources of aid, even if they are considered acceptable, for each submitted assignment.

This policy is a clarification of university policy:

As defined in the Handbook, plagiarism includes not only the literal incorporation—without appropriate citation—of phrases and sentences from the work of another person, but also the use of “views, opinions, or insights of another without acknowledgment” and “paraphrasing the characteristic or original phraseology, metaphor, or other literary device of another without proper attribution.”

There is no flexibility in this policy. If you cheat, you fail, and your academic career is likely to be prematurely terminated. The reason that you cheated is entirely immaterial. This policy applies equally to all parties, regardless of whether they are transmitting or receiving the material in question.

Print your name: Johnny Li CruzID: jozhli@ucsc.edu

Sign your name: Johnny Li Date: 1/12/2022

A signed copy of this agreement must be turned in to the professor before we will accept any assignment submissions from you. This may be done before or after class, or during office hours.
